

Rules of the Forum

1. In order to fully participate in the forum you will need to register with the forum. If you do not register you will only be able to read the postings made by others.
2. Members of the forum will be able to make postings and reply to existing posting and will be able to take part in votes on the forum.
3. Please register with your correct e-mail address, any one registering false or erroneous e-mail addresses will be removed from the forum.
4. You are welcome to provide a link to your own website (with an explanation of its purpose) in your postings but we would ask that this offer is reciprocated.
5. Please do not post adverts or commercials for goods or services, if you wish to advertise on the website please contact us via the links on the website.
6. Please do not post information on the forum unless you know it to be true, where possible provide a reference for information placed on the forum.
7. Please treat all other forum users with respect, any postings which are abusive or disrespectful will be removed and the sender will have their registration cancelled.
8. You may use the forum to send PM's (private messages) and contact other users via their e-mail addresses, however if anyone abuses these channels then their registration will be cancelled.
9. The forum administrators can accept no responsibility for the accuracy of information posted on the forum.